Half way up the principal street, behind a railing stood an old church with a burnal ground at its back sloping down to a stony beach, against which the smooth waters of the Channel rippled and murmured incessant;

I sat down, and gradually fell into a pleasant dream of hazy recollections and dissolving yiews, to which the roar of London still ringing in my ears, migled with the silvery sound of the waves, made what its cilled appropriate music? These fulling melodies were soon interrupted by a peal of bells from the church which rous ed me from my agreeable leverie.

Upon making inquires of an intelligent inhabitant as to the cause of the disturb ance I tound that the noise was the precursor of a wedding, which was about to be celebrated at the church behind the railing. Mark Lemon.

A cable telegram from London as ces the death of Mark Lemon, the well known editor of Punch. He was born in the English metropolis on the 30th of November, 1809, received a fair educabion and engaged in literary pursu ng man, writing for the stage and for newspapers. He was also a ber of the Guild of Literature and Art, and as such occasionally donned the sock and buskin. In 1841 he took part in establishing Punch and from the first was ditorially connected with the paper. Or $20 retirement of Mr. Henry Mayhew from the position of editor-in-chief M Lemon was chosen to succeed him, and until his death presided over the fortunes of the great comic and satiric weekly of London. As an author the deceased was well known for his dramatic pieces, o which he wrote upwards of sixty, and o amerous tales, of which 'The Enchante Doll," "Loved at Last," "Falkner Lile; Story of Two Wives" and "Leighton Hall, and Other Tales" are best known. In adand Other Taies' are nest known. In ad-dition Mr. Lemon was the author of nu-merous articles written for the literary publications, and of about a hundred songs. He was also the editor of a col-lection of jests published some years ago.

of the Baltimore American:

"The poads are situated at the base of a high hill, from which flows an abundant supply of clear spring water. They are oblong, and about ten feet wide by fifty in length, their sides, walled up with stone and cement. In one pond a large stock of trout from two to three years old is kept, many of which are eighteen inches in length. These are kept for breeding, and are quite tame, feeding readily from the hand of the keeper. In another pond trout ten inches in length are with the in another little fish scarcely longer than a pin may be seen slowly moving around. The determination of the owner is to raise a supply sufficiently old to take the place of the breeders before commencing to dispose of them. This he expects to be able to do by next summer."

CHARLES A. DANA, of the New York Sun, has been most ungenerous in the use of his pen, particularly when the objects of his satire had no chance of reply. He has found his match. John Russell Young, of the Standard, has silenced his guns, and is still pouring hot shot into the Sun's battered hulk. The following, from the Standard of the 22d, is a shot below the water-line:

"In the spirit of forgiveness and charity, and controlled as we are by a sense of eminent fitness, we nominate as Coroner for the city and county of New York, Mr. C. A. Dana.

It is reported one Fenian was killed and Capt. Crenon wounded in the thigh. The skirmish was witnessed by quite a number of citizens. United States Marshal Fester and Deputy Marshal Falley took commanding positions part ways up the hill, and were under fire all the time. About one o'clock, when O'Neil had gone to the right of his command, Gen. Foster had his close carriage brought near the position and immediately arrested Guenal O'Neil by virtue of the President's Proclim tion. The General said he refused to be arrested, and had a force there to protect himself. The Marshal seeing a lot of Fenians close at hand, threw open the carriage door, and with the aid of Failly, thrust the Fenian leader into their seats and the horses left in hot haste. The General arrived at the Weldon House, in this village, at 4 c-lock. O'Neil was soon after arraigned before U.

The arrest of Gen. O'Neil has fallen like a wet blanket on the Fenians, and reports from the front this evening say they are badly demoralized. The Fenians fought well, but it is evident they were not reinforced as they expected. There cannot be at the outside over 500 mm, whereas ammunition for four times that number had been provided. It is reported.

SOLD EVERYWHERE. The Popular Tonic of the billiousness, nervous affections, intermittent fevers and general debility, and as a constitutional invigorant, have entitled it to universal confidence. Nothing can over shake its reputation, for it is based on the individual experiances of tens of thousands of witnesses, embracing preminent and well known citizens of every profession, occupation and class. There is not a city, town or actilement in the United States where it is not a medicinal staple. No druggist or general dealer would consider his stock complete without it, and the returns of the internal revenue department show that its sales exceed those of any other preparatory restorative manufactured on this side of the Atlantic. The penedical results derived during a long series of years from the use of Hostetter's Bitters, have convinced the whole community that the only true way to restore to health a broken 25 m or debilitated system, or to put the human body on its defence when exposed to unwholsome influences, it is to invigorate, regulate and purify it at one and the same time.

For Congress.

Col. S. B. Dick, 'of Meadville, is announced as a candidate for Congress from this district, subject to Republican usages. Col. Dick is a gentleman of literary culture, a prominent and influential citizen of Meadville, of which he was recently chosen Mayor, and popularly known throughout the county and district. As a politician he has always been identified with the Republican party, and has rendered faithful and effective service in all our political campaigns. As a soldier, he filled a Captaincy and subsequently the Coloneley of the 11th Pennsylvania Recountly. The successful candidate in Crawford county. I said no wids of prayer, but all my heart and soul med to rest upon Gods mercy, and to seech him in silence to space my boy had taught Joe to swim when he was hild, and I knew he was strong and uldnt give in easy But then he had heavy boots and a tarpaulin coat and I it know what besides. He would not able to hold out long, and in such a sea. He might perhaps keep affect for a minutes.

By the time we had got down to the water side the lugger had tacked and was slanding in. There was a number of people out them, for the accident had been seen all along the shore, and other boats had been put off through the surf, though that could not hope to be of much use. The crowd stood down to the waters adjec, watching the lugger getting nearer and nearer to the land. Some were crying out, waving handkerchiefs, and looking wildly at her as she rolled about on the shore.

There was one poor woman down there, sur, holding a child by each hand It would have broken your heart to see her She didn't say anything, or cry, like many of them Her face looked white and cold hite marble She had a husband and son in the galley punt when she upset, and she knew, as we did, that only one man was awayd ontof the four I don't know which she hoped to see alive—her son, I believe, though he had never been any comfort to ker, but the mother's heart, you know, often loves the bad as well as the good My old wife and I tried to keep as quiet to make a show we could, for somehow, we did not like make a show he ligger began to draw near

At last the lugger began to draw near the beach. She was only three or four cables lengths off, but our eyes were too wet to see who was aboard of her. I pulled my sleeve arross mine and pushed forward almost into the surf. I could just count them. The man they had picked up was in the stern with the others, and I strained my eyes to catch a look at him as the boar rose on the waves, but, before I could make out who it was she would give a roi to windward or to leeward, and the foot of the double-reefed sail would hide him away again.

at the last moment always made me think they saw into the other world just as they were leaving this.

As for me, sir, I never forgot Joe's death for a moment I thinshed me. After my wife died, I used to wander about alone all day as if I was looking for him, and at might I weald come down on the beach there, and att among the boats, and look at the black, wild sea, and cry like a child It's this day two years that his body was washed ashore at that point of land out there where you see the big stone.

The old sailor drew his hand across his eyes when he had finished his yarn, and I asked him what became of Mary Scott, and whether she "took on' when Joe died.

"I never cared much about her, sir," said he, 'nor asked much. She did not come often to see us. People don't when you are in trouble. An old mate of imme told me she was to be married to-day to Tom Williams, and when I heard the bells this morning they went through my heart as they did when my poor boy was barred by the church up yonder and his mother and I followed him to the grave."

This simple story, and the sadaess of that desolate cottage, sent me away with a heavy heart, and set me to thinking of the wedding I had seen in the morning, and of the group in the oburch yard stopping before the mound with the wooden cross. As the low rumbling of the night trum up to London lulled me to sleep among the soft cuthons of a first class carriage, I fancied I could near the whisting and walling of the storm, though the sky was still and starlight, and through my dreams I saw the mournful figure of the cold man siting alone on the sea, and cry ing like a child
